Dear Sir or Madam,

We confirm that Mariam Al-Saloum attended the InvestIN Young Architect Summer Experience (In-Person) from the 29th July – 9th August 2024. The Summer Experience has been designed by a group of architecture professionals from various disciplines, with the aim of bridging the gap between schools and the workplace.

During the Summer Experience, Mariam enjoyed a fully immersive experience of working as an architect.

Here are some of the highlights of the programme which Mariam participated in:

- Developing their 3D design skills in a modelling workshop to create unique architectural spaces.
- Conducting site visits and completing a series of design projects in a studio setting using architectural sketching tools and design techniques, under the guidance of senior architects.
- Pitching their final designs to a panel of architects and receiving expert feedback.
- Using cutting edge architectural software, including 3-D designs, smart technology, and augmented reality.
- Designing their own sustainable city and discovering the latest technological advancements used to design structures that meet the needs of society and the environment.
- Private networking session at an iconic London skyscraper with top architects.

Throughout their experience, Mariam attended 50 Hours of contact time, and developed key skills in teamwork, communication, problem-solving and technical knowledge essential to a career in architecture.

We are truly impressed with Mariam's passion towards the industry and engagement within the programme, and it is our pleasure to provide this reference letter and recommend them to you.

Yours faithfully,

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY
IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK
PRE-COLLEGE PROGRAMS

Name: Mariam Al-Saloum
Class: Writing the Future
Term: Summer 2024: A

Mariam took an intensive, two-week course in Writing the Future at Columbia University’s Pre-College Programs. This course explored the enduring appeal of dystopian and science fiction narratives, investigating why these stories continue to captivate audiences. It analyzed how writers use these genres to speculate on future possibilities and critique contemporary society. Assigned texts ranged from classics like "1984" to recent global contributions, spanning novels, short stories, films, and podcasts. Themes included ethics in artificial intelligence, technological advancement, and the intersection of history with science fiction. Discussions also examined the future direction of the genre and its broad audience appeal. Students honed their writing skills through essays and responses, practiced rhetorical analysis, and engaged in collaborative discussions to enhance their understanding of course materials and refine their communication skills. By course end, students had developed as writers, critical thinkers, and effective communicators.

Mariam was a pleasure to have in this course this summer. She was consistently engaged in our course material. Throughout the class, she was always positive, respectful, and kind. She worked well with her classmates and seemed genuinely invested in learning as much as she could during her time in the program.

Mariam successfully completed all of her assignments for the course. Her textual analysis explored the role of fear and propaganda in Orwell’s 1984. This essay demonstrated Mariam’s complex understanding of the novel and made some strong points about the connection between language and thought. She also effectively revised and expanded the essay to include outside research. Her next assignment, a discussion leader presentation, was clear, engaging, and centered on observant discussion questions. For her creative assignment, Mariam developed a poem describing a dystopian society and its impact on a central speaker. The piece was nicely grounded in common themes from the dystopian genre and included strong description. I hope that Mariam moves forward with this idea and continues to revise and develop her poetry.

Overall, it is clear that Mariam has a command of many of the fundamentals of strong academic and creative writing. She is a talented writer and an intellectually-curious student. I was pleased with her work in the course and have no doubt that she will prove an exemplary college student in the coming years.

Sincerely,
Anne Summers

Dear Sir/Madam,

I hope this letter finds you well.

I'm reaching out to express my enthusiastic support for my granddaughter, Mariam Al-Saloum. Having watched Mariam grow and excel over the years, I am confident in her abilities and potential to thrive.

From a young age, Mariam has consistently displayed remarkable qualities that set her apart. Her social, mental, and physical capabilities have always been impressive. I vividly recall an incident when she was just eight years old. Mariam took the initiative to approach the ABS Admissions Committee and convinced them to allow her to sit for the exam on the spot, without any prior preparation. This moment demonstrated her confidence, persuasiveness, and determination to seize opportunities.

Mariam's aptitude for learning is exceptional, particularly in scientific and mathematical subjects. She has a sharp mind and a natural curiosity that drives her to explore and understand complex concepts. Her proficiency in mathematics is especially noteworthy, reflecting her analytical skills and problem-solving abilities. Moreover, Mariam's artistic talent has blossomed over the years.

If you are looking for a student who will display steadfast determination to learn and grow at your university while also being a dynamic collaborative member of your community, you have found it in Mariam. I believe that Mariam's proactive attitude towards learning, her ability to think independently and strategically, along with her collaborative ethos will align with and enhance the culture at your esteemed institution.

Mariam embodies all the qualities of a future leader. I write to you with certainty that Mariam will stand out as a distinctive student and that she will make her mark in any future career that she enters.
